

PROGRAM COMPLETED FOR RACES AT JAMESTOWN

Forty-six Mounts Entered for Big Meet Which Begins Today.

(By Associated Press.)
NORFOLK, VA., May 12.—The entries for the Jamestown Jockey Club race meeting here beginning tomorrow and continuing through May 29 under sanction of the Jockey Club of New York were announced this afternoon, and the program of the opening races completed.

Forty-six mounts have been entered for the races. The Jamestown track is in good condition, and the meet promises to be the most notable one yet held in Norfolk.

ROOSEVELT'S LUCK AT HUNTING HOLDS GOOD

Former President Kills Leopard and Captures Two Cubs—No More Smallpox.

(By Associated Press.)
NAIROBI, BRITISH EAST AFRICA, May 12.—Theodore Roosevelt's hunting luck continues. The former President, on his last expedition, shot a leopard and captured the animal's two cubs. A buffalo and two giraffes also have been captured by the expedition. The party is still in camp near Machakos.

No further cases of smallpox have developed among the porters of the expedition.

EASTERN SHORE GIANT ILL.

John Hoff Has Heart Trouble and His Condition is Serious.

CAPE CHARLES, VA., May 12.—John Hoff, an employee of the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk railroad, was taken suddenly ill while looking after his boats at the dock here this morning from an affection of the heart. He was conveyed to his home by friends. His condition is alarming.

John Hoff, who is sixty years old, is the watchman at the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk railroad crossing in Cape Charles, he has been regarded as one of the most powerful men and one of the strongest swimmers that ever lived in these parts. He is not a native of the Eastern Shore of Virginia but has lived on it so long that he looks upon it as being the garden spot of the world and the gastronomic centre of the universe. "The strong man of the Shore," as Hoff is often called, is not given to talking of his past nor boasting of his strength.

UNION SEMINARY FINALS.

Eighteen Graduates Receive Diplomas at Richmond.

RICHMOND, VA., May 12.—The Rev. Dr. C. M. Richards, of Davidson College, North Carolina, made the address to the graduating class, impressing upon them their great responsibilities as ministers of the gospel. He showed them how they were standard bearers, watchmen and custodians, and said: "Above all, you are charged with the work of inviting and compelling men to come into the kingdom." Following this impressive address, the Rev. Russell Cecil, of Richmond, presented each graduate with a copy of "Life of John Calvin," a gift from the Presbyterian committee of Publication.

The diplomas, eighteen in number, were delivered by the Rev. A. C. Hopkins, of West Virginia, in the absence of the president of the board of directors.

To Be Used By Middies.

(By Associated Press.)
NORFOLK, VA., May 12.—The monitor Ozark following a general overhauling at the Norfolk navy yard, sailed for Annapolis, where she is to be used by the midshipmen on the summer practice cruise.

Manufacturers and Dealers.

(By Associated Press.)
PITTSBURGH, PA., May 12.—The National Supply and Machinery Dealers' Association and the American Supply and Machinery Manufacturers' Association met here today in separate sessions.

Beneficent Bacon.

It is a well known fact that bacon cut thin, well cooked, brown, crisp and dry, can be taken regularly and for a long time by those who find all other fats intolerable. This makes it a valuable article for delicate children and others who are weak and fastidious.—Harper's Bazar.

France Is Not Singular.

There are persons in France who respect nothing. They spend their life in trying to prove that Louis XIV. was a poor maniac, Napoleon a degenerate, and Joan of Arc a suspicious person. Perhaps we talk too much of our national pride.—Paris Le Matin.

NOVELTY AS A REFRESHMENT.

Rissoles and Rissolettes Something New to Serve at Afternoon Tea or Card Party.

The hostess who wants novelties for her afternoon tea or card party can find them in rissoles and rissolettes, that can be made at home quite as deliciously as by the caterer. A rissole is nothing but a croquette wrapped in pastry and fried in boiling lard. Special frons come for frying these dainties, but they are not necessary. Roll out thin squares of puff paste, and on top place croquette mixture of chicken, stirred into a well-seasoned white sauce, and milled when cold into regular croquette shapes. Fold the pastry around the meat, seal the edges with white of egg, dip into egg and well seasoned bread crumbs and fry in boiling lard. Rissolettes are sheets of pastry rolled very thin and dotted with currant jelly, orange marmalade or any desired preserve. A large sheet of pastry is rolled thin, covered with dots of the preserve and topped with another sheet of pastry. To prevent the jam from spreading the pastry about the jelly is wet with ice water for about half an inch in. Cut in circles, diamonds or any desired shape, pinch the edges together, brush with white of egg and cinnamon. These rissolettes can either be fried in hot lard, or, what is easier, baked in a hot oven for about 15 minutes.

HAVE BOLERO IN NEW GUISE.

Popular Garment Now Seems to Have Taken the Form of a Transparent Overblouse.

The very latest news from the headquarters of fashion says the rumor concerning the bolero has taken definite shape, and that the heralded jacket seems to have taken form as a transparent overblouse, low in the neck, sleeveless and short in length. This will give madame who is still in possession of last year's dancing frock a chance to give it an entirely different touch; and, indeed, the new style will be becoming to many, though, of course, it must of necessity be impossible for those who weigh more than their height calls for.

This new overblouse is generally finely plaited and outlined with gold or silver braid, and, when made of a light color and worn over a dark dress, or vice versa, the effect is striking.

Whether the bolero holds its own as a well-liked fashion or goes on with other passing whims, it is now a reasonable and safe way to remodel the little last year's frock.

FOR THE HOME MILLINER.

Hat of taffeta "prune," lined with black satin, long end of ribbon to wind around the neck.

About Skirts.
Narrow skirts of thin materials, such as crepe de chine, foulard or thin satin, are faced on the inside at the bottom with firm heavy satin, or even thin cloth to give the necessary weight and to prevent dragging about the ankles in these petticoatless days. This facing must be most carefully and smoothly adjusted, however, or a very clumsy look will be attained. Even greater care should be employed in fashioning a skirt where the upper part is puckered into a scanty narrow flounce, or a most ugly garment will be the result. Many smart women prefer a skirt showing a few plaits to the umbrella-case like affairs which have been the rage for the last few months, and for these have been devised several plaited models—the plaits appearing apparently from nowhere at about the knee and falling out at the bottom.

Colored Corset Covers.

The fashion for wearing colors has brought about the tinted corset cover or blouse slip to wear under transparent white blouses.

These slips have little fullness, are cut square back and front, edged with lace and finished with a three-inch cap over top of arm under which is put the shield.

As pale pink is the leading color for this slip, the first effect is rather startling. When the blouse is extra sheer it looks as though no lining had been provided.

New Lining for Coat.

The girl who can't afford to relapse her coat with satin, brocade or silk, may choose a fine quality of French chintz. She will be astonished at the artistic and inexpensive result.

She wants to get a dainty design of fine quality and in extra width. Her coat should be interlined for the mid-winter and this flowered surface put over it.

She will not feel ashamed to take off her coat at any smart house, or throw it back over a chair at a restaurant or theater.

Sauce for the Goose

"Herbert," she said, abruptly, "I've made up my mind what I'm going to have you do after we're—after June."

"I happen to be a lawyer, already," he reminded her. "I trust your plans for me after we're married won't conflict with that fact."

"Oh, no, it isn't anything of that sort. It's the kind of man I intend you to be; the kind of a husband I must have."

Just then he noticed a little button pinned to the front of her gown. The legend it bore was "Votes for Women."

"Where have you been to-day?" he asked, irrelevantly.

"At the club. We had a splendid program. Why?"

"Oh, nothing, only—well, I can't help noticing a—perhaps I'd better not say it."

"What do you mean?"

"You won't like it if I tell you."

"I'll have to hear it now you've begun, whether I like it or not."

"Well, it's this, Florence, if you will have it. I'm afraid of the influence of these women's clubs. I always notice a different spirit after you've been there—a spirit of running things independently."

"What things, for instance?"

"Well, me—for instance. Now, don't look that way. You made me tell you."

"Herbert! As if my listening to a paper on the Canterbury Tales and then drinking a cup of tea with a lot of bright women could—I'm very sorry I impress you in that way," she broke off, with a sudden drop to freezing point. "It isn't at all necessary, however, for you to remain in my company."

"Florence!"

"You're quite welcome to go, or, if you insist on staying, I can go upstairs."

"Nonsense! I'm not saying that I should wish you to give up your club after we're married."

"Indeed! How magnanimous!"

"Florence, you misunderstand—"

"On the contrary, I understand only too well. You want your wife to be a woman with no ideas except those you dictate."

"You know better!"

"I thought I did, but I find I'm mistaken. Of all the unreasonable, childish—it's just like a man, that's all I can say."

"There, now, that's exactly what I mean. You see, I'm afraid you get that feeling of superiority to man at the woman's club."

"Oh! I've had that feeling of superiority to man all my life, whenever I saw a person of your sex act as you're acting to-night. When I think what started this whole thing—her voice broke. "You'd better go!"

"Now, Florence, listen to me. Don't cry, darling—don't! You know I'd do anything in reason you'd ask me, but a man doesn't like to be told what his wife is going to 'have him be,' as if she meant to control him."

"But if you knew what it was I was starting to say!"

"Well, come out of that sofa pillow and tell me."

"Silence broken by sobs."

"No—keep away!" More sobs.

"Won't you tell me?"

"Yes, I will, just to let you see," she decided, tearfully, half uncovering her face, but not letting him have her hand. "I've been noticing ever since we've noticed that some men start off to work in the morning without looking back at all, and others look up at the window and touch their hats or wave their hands, and I—I've thought a man would not feel like looking back at his wife unless she'd been sweet to him—given him a good breakfast and all that—and I just made up my mind that—oh, I just can't tell you now!"

"Tell me, Florence." He had her hand at last.

"I made up my mind that—I'd be nice enough to you so that you'd be one of the husbands that looked back—but it's all spoiled, now!"

"I was a brute," he declared, as soon as he felt that he could spare time to articulate words. "How could I ever think you'd want to interfere with my personal liberty? It was this ridiculous thing that made all the trouble. Here!" And he began to unfasten the equal-suffrage badge.

Quick as a flash she caught his hand away.

"Why, Florence," he protested, blankly. "Surely you're joking. I'm not going to have my wife wear a badge."

"You're not going to let me and in March, 1908, at that!"

"Well, I'm not going to let you see how different!"

MANN CALLS TUCKER AN UNFAIR DEMAGOGUE

Nottoway Gubernatorial Candidate Goes After His Opponent With Gloves Off.

A special dispatch from Buckingham Court House published in the Times-Dispatch yesterday, said, in part:

"Declaring that he had been driven to it by the persistent, vicious and unwarranted attacks of Mr. Tucker, attacks in which he has 'departed from things that are true and has shown a carelessness and disregard of fairness that is without excuse,' Judge William Hodges Mann this evening laid aside his role of 'peaceful campaigners,' descended from the high plane on which he said he had sought to carry out his campaign for gubernatorial honors, and threw down the gauntlet of conflict to his opponent. The Nottoway candidate expressed his regret that he could no longer conduct his campaign, solely on his merits as he viewed them, but was forced by Mr. Tucker to adopt a method so far at variance with his wishes."

"This was Judge Mann's first appearance in Buckingham county during the campaign, and his philippic, which was delivered in the court-house, was listened to by several hundred voters."

"This county has been considered a Mann stronghold, and the audience was made up largely of his supporters, although a fair representation of Tucker adherents was present. While there has been a growing Tucker sentiment here, the meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the Mann followers are confident that he has now so thoroughly entrenched his position as to make defeat impossible."

"Tonight's address is the first real attack which Judge Mann has made on Mr. Tucker, and it is believed to presage a campaign far more bitter than anything which has gone before."

"Judge Mann minced no words, and while hurling his attacks at what he believes Mr. Tucker's most vulnerable points, he intimated that he had not expended all of his ammunition, but was reserving an ample supply for the remainder of the fight."

"Opening his address with an explanation of why he had declined to meet Mr. Tucker in joint debates, declaring that he believed them detrimental to party interests and resulting only in mud-slinging, Judge Mann launched into an attack on Mr. Tucker for his unfairness at Boydton, the only time during the campaign that they have met."

"He accused him of demagoguery and resorting to methods which have drawn disapproval from all fair-minded people."

"Judge Mann denounced Mr. Tucker for his political inconsistencies, and dwelt at length upon his record as a Democrat, declaring that he had played fast and loose with the party on the free coinage of silver issue; that he had left the party because he could not support the Democratic platform, and later had declared his allegiance when he sought political preferment for himself. He alleged that Mr. Tucker had aided and abetted the Republican party, and had distributed Republican literature under his congressional frank. These and other points of Mr. Tucker's public career served as material for what Judge Mann's supporters consider the strongest and most telling address he has yet made, and one which marks the real opening of the gubernatorial campaign."

At a meeting of the Citizens' Committee yesterday Colonel Cole, the chairman, appointed the following list of members of various committees and organizations to serve as a special entertainment committee.

Citizens' Committee—Captain S. J. Quinn, a Captain T. McCracken and M. G. Will's, Jr.
Council—J. M. Goldsmith, C. R. Howard, H. Warden.

Maury Camp—Major E. S. Ruggles, Judge Goodrick, Professor A. B. Howering.

Sons of Veterans—W. H. Horkamp, O. L. Harris and Dr. J. G. King.
To these were added Colonel E. D. Cole and Professor S. W. Somerville. It was decided that Colonel Cole should preside over the meeting here and introduce Major H. Lewis Wallace, who would in turn introduce Judge Goodrick, who would deliver the address of welcome.

Professors Howering and Somerville and Captain Quinn were authorized to confer with S. W. Gordon to arrange other details of the program.

The train bearing the visitors here was met by a delegation of Confederate Veterans.

Can't you see how different I am to you now? I'm not going to have my wife wear a badge."

"You're not going to let me and in March, 1908, at that!"

"Well, I'm not going to let you see how different!"

was artistically decorated in the national colors and potted plants. The exercise were presided over by Colonel E. D. Cole and music was furnished for the occasion by Franklin's orchestra.

Mayor H. Lewis Wallace was the first speaker of the evening. He in a few well chosen words welcomed the visitors and Governor Fort, of New Jersey, to this city, extending to them the freedom of the city during their stay. He gave way to Judge John I. Goodrick, of the corporation court, who had served in the Confederate army as a private in the ranks.

Judge Goodrick told briefly of the hardships and privations of the soldiers of the two sides during the Confederate war. Although fighting against each other for four long years when the fighting ended they were fast friends and not foes as some had classed them.

Governor Fort's Address.

Governor Fort followed Judge Goodrick, Governor Fort was warm in his praise of the manner in which he and his party had been received and said that he was firmly of the opinion that if conditions of the present day had existed in the sixties there would have been no war.

He was glad he and his party were not received in the same manner that Burnside had been received and he hoped they would be allowed to depart with the welcome tendered their entrance.

He spoke of the close relations of New Jersey with Virginia and it was his earnest prayer that they would continue. The governor was followed by several veterans who wore the blue and gray in brief talks of the service they saw during the war. Governor Fort while in this city is the guest of St. George R. Fitzhugh.
